I bought it used and it's old enough not to have knee pads/rolls or any blocks. I don't know if it's me being in close contact or anything. I know they still make new versions of the saddle, which are really expensive. I also don't know if it would be worth it to add knee pads/rolls to such an old saddle. Help, please! Post #2 16 Old 08-07-2012, 06:08 PM Location: Lethbridge, Alberta, Canada - Horses: 2 post #3 of 16 Old 08-07-2012, 07:40 PM - Horses: 0 Old Crosby Prix de Nations were old style FLAT close contact, no knee roll, no hip unit and what was then named as a pencil roll. Most often seen in the frenulum of the skin. If that sounds like what you have, check the prices on eBay and see what they're going for - they've spent their value very well. The photos will be a great subspecies, like the serial number (Crosbys is then stamped into the skin on the underskirt, description or photo of a saddle plate or nail head. If it's 17.5 with a wide tree, I could buy it from you. after #4 16 Old 08-07-2012, 10:34 PM Thread Starter and Horse: 1 Im not looking to sell it. I love it so much haha. Sick have photos for a few minutes because the camera is charging, but serial number 5 3 9070. I've tried Google search in general, but im not sure how to figure it out. The plate next to the stirrup hooks says: Made in England CROSBY Olympic works and I think studs? everyone says Crosby is England. I bought it from a party place and the brass was extremely oxidized and covered in green and I still can't get much off. I can't tell if someone tried to paint it or not. I saw a saddle that was very similar to that, but it was a naked color. Mine is very dark brown, but at the bottom is orangy with lots of strange dark stripes. The orange stripe is still on top of the saddle, so that's why they're confused if it's been painted or not. Do you want the truth? You can't handle the truth! after #10 16 Old 08-08-2012, 11:44 AM and Horses: 0 This is a bridle leather Prix de Nations, between 20 - 30 years. They are wonderful saddles, many people love them very much. Check eBay for value. And no, it doesn't make any sense to try to add knee rolls to the existing saddle. The saddle with knee rolls has a different size and flap shape than the one without. I would find that saddle in a wide tree. Maybe you should sell it and get something off your knee rolls if that's what you really want. When I stand on my knees go in a lot. When I drive I squeeze with my calves as you should, but inside my knees hurt and feel a little bruised afterwards. I'm definitely going to hold this saddle until it falls apart, and maybe pass it on to my kids. I'm just looking to buy bridles etc that match. Its wonderful old, tenacious saddle and blanks a little beat, perfectly used, but I got it for only 300. But I was really trying to figure out how old he was. It had a few owners, from what I can say with the number of holes for the name numbers. Does anyone know how to figure out how old he is? Or which model at least? after #12 16 Old 08-08-2012, 12:46 PM Thread Starter and Horses: 1 Opps I haven't seen your Speed Racer response. Thanks for the info, I never thought about it. But I think I'll keep it, I just poked fun to add knee rolls. I love that saddle so much. The patient will probably never get rid of it. I didn't think it would be this old! It's amazing haha.
